

RUSSIANS LOSING 10,000 KILLED

Arrival of Part of the Port Arthur Garrison at Dalny.

GO TO JAPAN AS PRISONERS

MEN SHOW TRACES OF TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

Tokio, Jan. 9.—The well-known circles it is estimated that the Russian garrison at Port Arthur numbered about 28,000 to 30,000 men, including sailors. The killed, those who died of sickness and those missing are placed at over 10,000.

Headquarters of the Japanese Third Army at Port Arthur, Jan. 6.—Via Yinkow and Tientsin, 11,000 men of the Russian garrison at Port Arthur were marched from the village of Yuhai, on the shores of Pigeon bay, for 27 miles to the railway station at Changchun, this afternoon. The first detachment arrived at Changchun at 9 o'clock, and the other detachments followed soon after. Each detachment was accompanied by six loaded transport carts.

The Russians during the night will be taken on special trains of open trucks, Dalny, and then immediately embarked for Japan on transports now waiting in that port.

Pathetic Scene.

The long procession of the remnants of the gallant Russian garrison was a pathetic spectacle. The first division, drawn by sorry-looking horses, they contained the staff officers who had remained with their people. All wore their swords, as they were allowed to do under the terms of the capitulation.

A few minutes later the first detachment arrived. The regimental officers marched with their men, their heads bowed and their faces seamed with lines, showing the result of the mental and physical strain they had undergone during the long defense.

Officers Resentful.

As the Japanese soldiers crowded about them with evident curiosity, the faces of the Russian officers were an interesting study. All of them appeared to feel their humiliating position keenly, and though some seemed to be resigned to their situation, others were resentful at being regarded with curiosity.

The men looked well fed, but their faces, like those of the officers, indicated the awful physical strain they had undergone. The officers were clean and well-dressed, but the men were clad in shabby-looking sheepskin coats and appeared to be resigned and sad that the end had come.

Animals Were Lean.

The horses drawing the transport carts were staggering with fatigue, though the loads were small. They were tied to the carts and led by orderlies. In the procession were many lean-looking pet dogs belonging to the officers.

Japs Were Kind.

The prisoners were treated with the greatest respect and kindness. Though they were regarded with much natural curiosity, the soldiers were given food, cigarettes and beer. The correspondent of the Associated Press even saw Japanese soldiers carrying the wounded effects of the prisoners when they were overcome by fatigue.

The railway had been repaired, and the gauge changed almost to the city of Port Arthur, into which trains will enter in a few days.

Telephone and telegraph lines have been completed to the city, and the Japanese engineers are surveying the destroyed forts of the eastern fortified city.

MOODY ARGUES BEEF TRUST CASE

Two Questions For the Determination of the Court.

NATURE OF THE COMMERCE

AGREEMENT WHICH CONSTITUTES MONOPOLY.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Attorney General Moody resumed his argument on behalf of the government before the supreme court of the United States in the case of Swift & Co. vs. the United States, commonly known as the "beef trust" case, begun last Friday.

Mr. Moody said one of the agreements or acts complained of related to manufacture or production, but to commerce as distinguished from manufacture or production. They do not accomplish fusion of property interests.

Thus, he said, the inquiry is narrowed down to only two questions for the determination of the court: Whether the commerce in the case was commerce among the states, and if so, whether the agreements constitute a monopoly or any part of it.

Mr. Moody said it appears clearly in the petition that there were three main subjects upon which the defendants entered into an agreement.

Taking up the agreement alleged in paragraph 2 of the petition, Mr. Moody said that eliminating all the statements by which the defendants characterized the purpose and effect of the agreement the following state of facts is shown:

Facts in the Case.

"Persons owning livestock and living in other states and territories than those where the stockyards are situated were accustomed to send such stock to the various stock yards named for the purpose of slaughtering and converting it into fresh meat, entered into an agreement."
